
HOSPITAL OF THE UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA
Department of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine
Surgical Pathology Fellowship

Description: Eight one-year fellowships are offered to provide advanced experience in surgical pathology. These positions have received ACGME special selective accreditation. The surgical pathology practice of the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania functions in a subspecialty model. The responsibilities of the fellow include supervised signout of a comprehensive range of medical and oncologic surgical specimens and responsibility for frozen section diagnoses. Fellows rotate through all of the surgical pathology subspecialty rotations and choose a subspecialty of particular interest for additional concentration. Development of a translational research project during the fellowship year is encouraged. The laboratory accessions approximately 34,000 surgical specimens a year. Candidates who demonstrate excellence in diagnostic skills, a firm commitment to teaching, and completion of a research project related to human disease may be eligible for the H. T. Enterline Fellowship Award.

Requirements: Successful completion of the Residency requirements for certification in Anatomic Pathology.

Stipends: Stipends are commensurate with the year of postgraduate training.

Applications: Must be made before January 1 of the year preceding the intended fellowship (begins July 1). Applications will be accepted until all positions are filled. Apply to Kathleen T. Montone, Director Surgical Pathology Fellowship, Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, 3400 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, PA 19104
