

October 18, 2009

I used the ICPI Trainee Travel Award to attend the CAP'09 THE Pathologists' Meeting in Washington D.C. in October 2009. At the meeting, I presented my poster titled "Adenomyoma of the Jejunum: Report of an Unusual Case". I met residents and practicing pathologists from all over the world. I also participated in several educational courses including "Challenges and Controversies in Thyroid Surgical Pathology", "Current Concepts in the Diagnosis of Medical Liver Disease", "Basic Placental Pathology", and "Diagnosing Salivary Gland Neoplasia". These lectures were all very good. I learned a lot and brought home very useful handouts and notes to share with other residents as well as attendings in my program. In addition, I learned about the new diagnostic tools and technologies applied in pathology diagnosis by talking with the sales representatives of several companies. I have already discussed with the attendings in my institute about the new technologies that I learned. In summary, I thoroughly enjoyed the CAP'09 meeting. Without the support from ICPI, I wouldn't be able to attend it. Thank you, ICPI.

Xin Qing, MD, PhD

Harbor-UCLA Medical Center