Dear ICPI Board and members,

I would like to thank you for the travel award that allowed me to attend the 2012 ASCP annual meeting in Boston, Massachusetts.

This meeting not only gave me the chance to attend several resident review and pathologist-in-practicing courses but also to network with other residents and pathologists from all over the world. The courses were given by well-known speakers who are experts in their field. The teaching materials were well prepared and covered vast areas in both surgical and clinical pathology.

Additionally, the meeting helped me learn important points regarding to my board exam preparation. I was also happy to meet other residents who attended the meeting and I learned about their training and research activities.

The oral and poster sessions allowed me opportunities for further learning and networking. My presentation was during the session for best international poster finalist and it was about "two rare cases of fatal intoxication from metformin and literature review". I received precious feedback from faculty and residents. I also learned about current researches from other residents and scientists.

In summary, I thank the ICPI again for the opportunity to attend the 2012 ASCP annual meeting as that meeting was a valuable part of my education.

Sincerely,

Payam S. Pahlavan, M.D.
