Re: ICPI Travel Award

Dear ICPI Board:

I would like to thank the ICPI for supporting my attendance at the American Society of Clinical Pathology (ASCP) Annual Meeting from Oct 7-10, 2014 in Tampa, Florida, United States.

During the conference, I attended many academic and clinical seminars. The ASCP annual meeting offers many world-class courses delivered by national renowned pathologists and scientists. I enjoyed these precious and practical education opportunities so much and a couple of times I had to make very tough decisions in choosing which one I should attend. The whole learning processes enhance my knowledge of surgical pathology, forensic pathology and clinical pathology. I was able to improve my areas of weakness, as well as review topics in preparation for routine examinations. The second and third day of the conference, I presented my poster titled "Clinical Cytology-Pathology Correlation for Diagnosis of Fallopian Tube Prolapse after Hysterectomy" and discussed this unusual and rare case with other pathologists and scientists. Those gave me great opportunities to appreciate their individual unique perspective. The last day of the conference, we had a resident's forum. This event gave me a great opportunity to network with pathology residents from all over the world. I was especially happy to share our training and research experience.

Again, I appreciate the ICPI for the travel stipend; I feel that the other events put on by the ICPI are also fantastic ways to help pathology professionals.

Sincerely,
